Testimonials of the participants

The participants' testimonials in the final evaluation serve as the greatest recognition of the project's success. In the end, along with a group evaluation of the program, we conducted an individual and anonymous survey with the following questions:

What has been the most surprising aspect of this self-organization process?

Have you learned something about yourself and others?

Have you overcome any challenges (or not)?

Anything else to add?

Testimonials of the participants

"I have learned that communication is not just language and words; there are many different ways to communicate, share, and connect with others."

"We have been able to take on responsibility through creativity."

"These wonderful people have taught me that many of my prejudices are not correct."

Testimonials of the participants

"Being here, I have been different from how I normally am, and I have realized that I can be myself in my context."

"I had forgotten that learning should be fun."

"I have learned that expressing what I truly feel makes me stronger."

"I have loved discovering people to whom I wouldn't have given a chance in my context."

Testimonials of the participants

"Self-organization has been a great challenge, but I have learned a lot. I always missed this topic in my education."

"Thank you for helping me discover my potential."

"We have learned to live in perfect cohesion despite having different cultures, personalities, and lifestyles."

"The most important thing has been the awakening of the desire to learn other languages."

"I am more aware of my privileges."

"I have learned to work in a group, and I have discovered that I am capable of doing many things in life."

Testimonials of the participants

"One of the challenges for me was discussing delicate topics because I had prejudices toward people from other cultures. I have learned that simply talking and sharing can be very enriching, that nothing is obvious just because it is obvious in my context, and that we can discuss controversial topics without the risk of fighting."

"Self-organization works; it motivates me a lot to continue using it in the future."

"I have learned about cultures, minorities, stereotypes, conflict management, and difficult situations."
